

Daily Standup
Yesterday

- I created some graphics and layouts in black and white
- Spent the majority of the day finalizing my site. I think I am finally content with it. I will post it on the show and tell channel soon.
- Added a goals page to my site
- Completed my substack article

Today

- Reorganize my mood board and experiment with shapes, space, and colour
 - Practice responsive layout and add it to my garden
- Create a responsive layout webpage
- Post my article
- Start a new thing-a-day
- Revise my goals

No blockers

Have a great day!

What are the challenges?

We'd better figure some out. They are sorta implied / but go and write what YOU think they are in the appropriate channel.

Video 1

- In your mood boards, change how they might relate to each other - creating contrast between images and creating a juxtaposition
- Create different-sized images
- Big areas of colour or space to contrast depth
- Use the contrast of size, shape, colours, and space to develop some magic Challenge: Select a couple of images from your mood board and change how they relate to each other. Reorganize those images based on size, colour, shape, style, pattern, and depth. Think about how you might want to organize the space around those images. Provide an opinion on the design choices you have made.

Video 2

Challenge: Use shapes and play with the space, transparency, colour, position, and size of the elements. Experiment with positioning different sized elements in the corner, on top of each other, beside each other, and far or close to each other. Design decisions should have a purpose, reason, and consistency so you can confidently sell your ideas to the client.
